

MEGHAN HILDEBRAND

With dreamlike explorations of real and imagined places, Meghan Hildebrand's paintings invite viewers into vibrant worlds without clear boundaries—spaces where open-ended stories unfold. Her intuitive process of layering colour and form through spontaneous mark-making gives her work a raw, dynamic energy. These moments of discovery keep her practice in constant evolution.

In her latest series, Meghan delves into the coastal forest surroundings of her small-town home, using a bold, maximalist approach to capture the magic and intensity of life in the woods. Nature bursts with energy, while subtle signs of human impact—roads, structures, stumps—remind us of our presence. The daughter of an artist and a miner, she explores Canada's complex relationship with the land: reverence alongside resource extraction.

Originally from Whitehorse, Yukon, Meghan studied at the Kootenay School of the Arts and NSCAD. Since 1994, her paintings have been exhibited widely and are collected internationally, with representation across Canada, the U.S., and the Philippines. She now lives and works on the Sunshine Coast of BC.
